Getting to Toronto

By Plane

Toronto has two airports, Pearson International Airport (YYZ) and the Billy Bishop Toronto City Airport (YTZ).

Pearson

There are direct flights to Pearson from most major world cities. It takes about an hour to get downtown by public transit ($3), or half an hour by car.

Billy Bishop City Airport

The city airport is right downtown. Air Canada and Porter Airlines both serve the airport. Porter flies from major cities in Ontario and Quebec, as well as cities around the Great Lakes and on the East Coast. Air Canada flies into the airport from Montreal.

By Train

Toronto's main train station, Union Station, is located downtown. Via Rail travels throughout Canada. It also has limited connection with Amtrak from the U.S.

By Bus

The Toronto Coach Terminal is downtown. Greyhound has arrivals from across North America. An alternative service from several cities in New York state and along the East Coast is megabus.com.

Staying in Toronto

The two days of workshops will be held at York's Glendon campus. We recommend participants either stay near that campus or downtown. We have listed a few accommodation choices in both areas. Those that are within an hour walking distance are noted. The downtown options are close enough to public transit to get you to Glendon in under an hour.

Getting Around Toronto

The public transit system is suitable for getting to and from all events associated with the conference. The subway is accessible, although not all subway stations are. Buses are of mixed accessibility. While the streetcars are not accessible, they are not required for any of the conference events.

There is a free university that runs between Keele and Glendon campuses

Public transit

The TTC operates 24 hours a day. However, not every route is serviced at all hours. The subway runs from 6AM to about 1:30AM Mon-Sat and 9AM to 1:30AM Sun. The subway route is covered by buses after it closes each day.
